REPORT

OF THE

SCHOOL COMMITTEE

OF THE

TOWN OF WEST CAMBRIDGE,

FOR THE YEAR 1857-8.

BOSTON:

impossible for the children to get the amount of air necessary for their health, without opening the windows and causing a very unsafe exposure. Several children have been removed from this school, because their health was suffering from the impure atmosphere of the room to such an extent as to alarm the parents. The atmosphere in this room when heated by a stove, and breathed over and over again by eighty or ninety children, is exceedingly offensive and unwholesome. We are satisfied that, if the parents would visit the school often enough to ascertain the dangers to which they are subjecting their children, by sending them here, this great obstacle to the usefulness of the school, would soon be removed.

SOUTH DISTRICT.

The upper School in this District was for the first two terms of the year under the charge of Mr. A. R. Bullard; the last term, it was taught by Mr. G. S. Newcomb.

This School has suffered for several years the evils consequent upon a frequent change of teachers. At the examination made by the Committee, in the Autumn, the school appeared very well. At the public examination this Spring, there were so few scholars present, that we were unable to form a just opinion of the condition of the school. This school, under a good teacher, with the co-operation of the parents, must take a high rank among our schools.

The Primary School in this District has been taught by Miss Ellen W. Douglass.

This School has been broken in upon considerably by sickness the last part of the year. This examination of the small number present, at the close of the term, gave satisfaction to the parents present, and to the Committee.

The law which requires the Committee to make a detailed report of the Public Schools, also requires us to make such statements and suggestions in relation to such schools as we shall deem necessary or proper to promote the interest thereof. In accordance with this requirement, the Committee would call the attention of the citizens, and especially of parents, to our Primary School-rooms. We have one school of ninety scholars, and another of a hundred, in rooms quite inadequate to their accommodation. These rooms are uncomfortable and unhealthy. According to the lowest estimate ever made of the quantity of air necessary for an individual, these rooms do not afford enough for a much smaller number of children than is daily found in them. Any system of education is perfect just so far as it produces a unity and symmetry in the developement of all the powers. Now in these rooms the physical developement is not only neglected, but the seeds of weakness and disease are sown. Children may there secure a certain amount of intellectual developement, but the proper balance of powers is destroyed, for nothing is more strictly true than that "a healthy mind resides in a healthy body." Persons thus educated are not well trained to combat error, and to judge of what is true in life, but are fitted to become easy victims to the various delusions with which our age is teeming.

The Primary School-rooms in the Centre and North West Districts, demand immediate attention. In the South District, the urgency of the case is not so great, owing to the small number of scholars, yet the room is far from what it should be. The liberality with which the town responded to the request for an additional appropriation for the schools as soon as the necessity for it was shown, makes the Committee hope that the citizens will visit these schools-rooms, where we are sure they will be convinced of the necessity of a change, and that we shall soon have suitable accommodations for the schools.

To increase the usefulness of our schools, there is needed a more earnest interest in education among all the inhabitants of the town. The general School Committee and the teachers are not the only guardians of the educations of our children; every man exerts an influence upon his own children or upon other children in his neighborhood. The children bring to school the influences that they have felt at home, and which they have felt in the street, in the shops and stores they have entered. Each citizen in town should consider himself bound to obey the spirit of our statute law, and to "exert his influence, and use his best endeavors that the youth of the town shall regularly attend the schools;" and to aid our school teachers "to impress on the minds of children and youth committed to their care and instruction, the principles of piety, justice, and a sacred regard for truth, love to their country, humanity, and universal benevolence, sobriety, industry and frugality, chastity, moderation and temperance, and those other virtues which are the ornament of human society, and the basis upon which a republican constitution is founded."

Finally, the Committee would call the attention of the town, particularly, to one practical difficulty which has been alluded to, and which should be recognized and understood, although at present it may be inconvenient to meet it with a sufficient remedy. They refer to the imperfect classification of Schools. The division of schools into Grammar and Primary, simply, can hardly be considered a system; and yet a systematic arrangement of schools, suited to the different marked degrees of intellectual development in children, is the only means of securing to all a proper training. For example, the Primary School groups together two distinct grades of scholars: the alphabet children, or beginners, and those who for two years or more have been subjected to educational discipline.

The difference between these two grades is greater than is ordinarily supposed. The child of five years, who is just beginning its school career, is impatient of long restraint and confinement, and in its early steps in knowledge, requires considerable freedom and indulgence, and much personal attention on the part of the teacher. It is gently, patiently, and reasonably to be led into the method and discipline by which its young mind is to be developed. After the experience of two or three years, it has learned to submit to order, authority and wholesome restraint, and calls for different treatment and oversight. Now it is impossible to combine in a single school the methods of discipline which these two grades of children require. One grade will be governed too loosely, and the other too strictly, if the discipline be uniform; or if an attempt be made to govern each according to its requirements, there must result confusion in the entire discipline. The Primary School should, therefore, be divided. This has already been done to some extent in the school in the North West District. The assistant teacher has charge of the younger children in the smaller room, and their separation from the other scholars has proved to be to their mutual benefit.

In the Grammar Schools a similar necessity for separation appears. In the first place, the youngest class is ordinarily too young for the Grammar School, but it has been pushed upward to make room for the increasing number in the Primary School, from which it has just come. Then the oldest class has attained to the point when the mind begins to appreciate and crave for knowledge, and while no longer needing so much of the artificial restraint under which it has reached its present growth, requires still the constant guidance and aid of the experienced teacher. Here, again, must be a conflict of treatment. The classes below the first have not yet outgrown the discipline which their proper culture demands; the first class has passed beyond it. The teacher then must adapt his management as he best can, to the wide range of age and mental character of his school. The result must necessarily be, that one grade or another of scholars will suffer, through the impossibility of directing the teachers' attention to these widely different claims.

This difficulty in the classification of schools is no new experience. Other communities have suffered from it, and have found its remedy. This consists in a separation of the different grades of scholars into separate schools. The Primary School is sub-divided into Alphabet and Primary Schools. The Grammar School comprises those children who are able to pass into it from the Primary School, according to a scale of qualification; together with those who are younger than the oldest class of Grammar scholars. The children composing this oldest class are then placed in a Central, or High School, where they can receive that individual attention, and competent instruction, which their age and mental condition demand.

In the cities, a further sub-division is made, but in a town like this, the system indicated would suffice.

The Committee cannot feel that they have discharged their entire duty, without bringing the necessity of this change of classification of schools to the attention of their fellow citizens. It secures a complete and regular grade of schools, in which children within the school age, receive a training according to their intellectual condition and requirement. Uniformity, and progressive advancement are thus obtained in all the schools, and effort on the part of the scholars is stimulated, as they see before them the successive steps of attainment, ending at last in the highest school. The character of the schools throughout, arranged under such a system, must be that of life, interest and improvement.

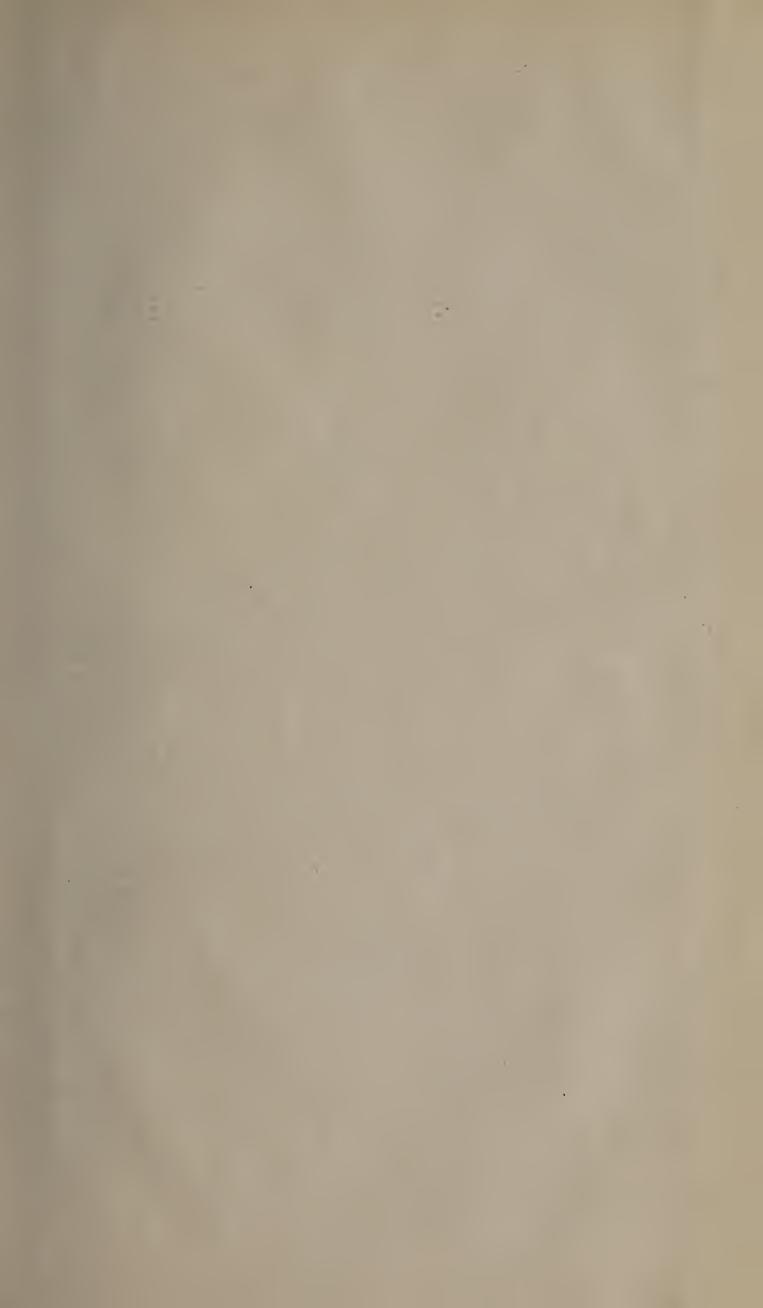

The Committee ask the careful consideration of these suggestions by parents, and friends of the schools.

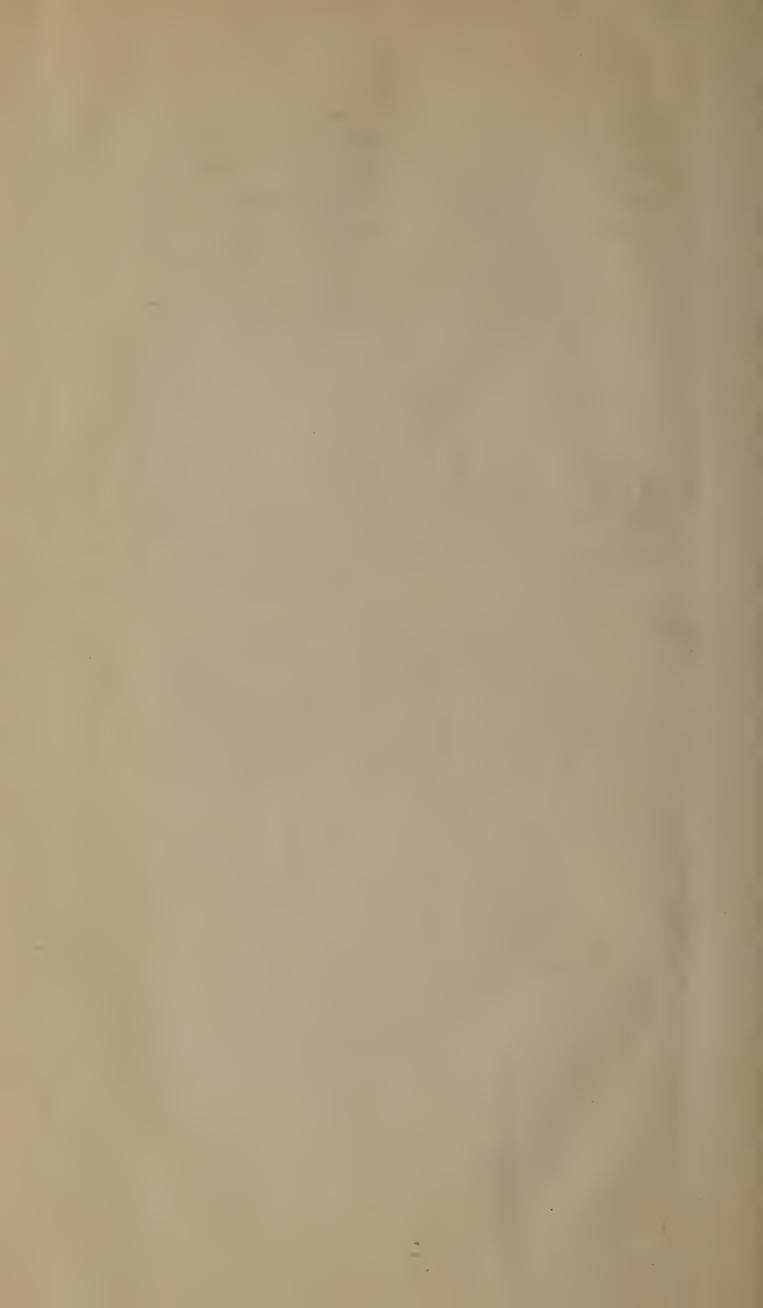

The change proposed is quite practicable. The addition of a room to each school-house, and the employment of an assistant in each Primary School, would effect the necessary division in the younger schools. The Grammar Schools are already provided for. It will remain to make provision for a Central School; and this is the only alteration which will require any considerable outlay and expense.

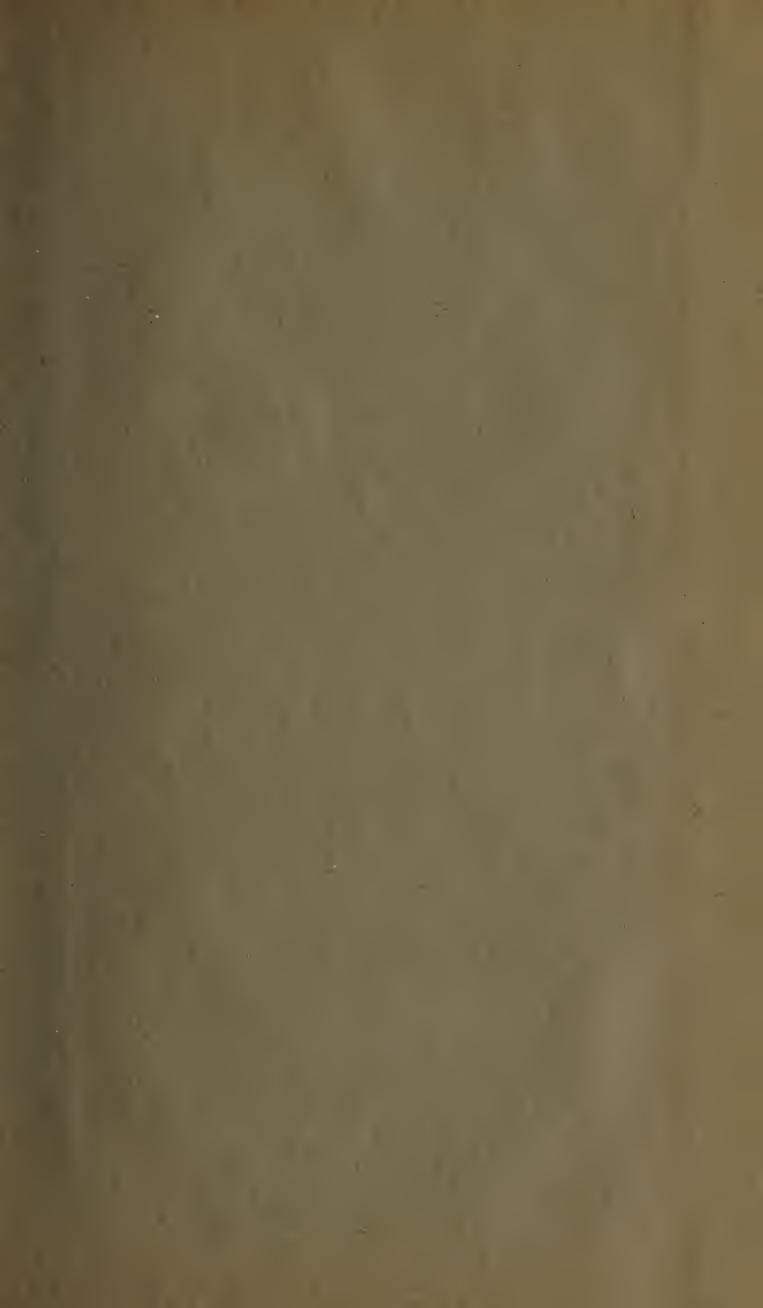

Still the Committee are not disposed to press any plan upon their fellow-citizens, until upon examination and reflection the town is prepared to act upon the subject. They are content to leave this general statement of the difficulty and its remedy, feeling confident that ere long, the necessity of decided and thorough action will be seen by all.
